Undivided

All is undivided.

We are each a stroke of color,
a single note,
A sun-fleck on the ocean;

A burst of light,
A hanging torrent,
A final breath of wind
Within a single drop of rain.

We are sung by our music,
Shaped by our clay,
Imagined by our dreams;

We exist with our hands;
We give life for life.
We are turned to polished glass
Within the mind still wet with paint.

The real moon is in the lake,
The deepest well behind the eye,

And all is blurred to beauty.
